Up to ten dynamic levels are sampled for each key. Every recording is a complete sustained note, with a full, natural decay to silence—there are no loops. Each can be installed separately, or you can install them all together. Fairly Odd Parents Easter Eggs.

All 88 keys of every piano (and in the case of the Bosendorfer, the extended lower octave as well) are recorded individually, in stereo, with phase coherence, and stored as 32-bit samples.

Ivory's creators are accomplished pianists as well as programmers, and know that no single piano, no matter how great, is right for all players, all styles or all recording situations. Therefore, Ivory contains more than 40 Gigabytes of carefully assembled, unlooped and untransposed samples of three distinct world-class instruments: a Bosendorfer 290 Imperial Grand, a German Steinway model D nine-foot concert grand, and a Yamaha C7 grand. These pianos were tuned and regulated by expert technicians, and were recorded in superb-sounding studios and concert halls. For the EastWest/Quantum Leap Pianos and Synhogy Ivory MAC RECOMMENDED SYSTEM. Ivory is a comprehensive virtual instrument reproducing the sounds of the world's finest grand pianos.

Each can be installed separately, or you can install them all together. Ivory also contains its own 32-bit playback and DSP engine, which was designed from the ground up to perform the various specialized tasks of reproducing piano performance, and which can be hosted on every major workstation platform on Macintosh and PC computers. Every set of recordings, or "For each key. Because the sound of the damper muting the string differs according to how long a note has been sounding before the key is released. Ivory's release samples have been taken not only at different key velocities, but at different time intervals after the onset of the note. Therefore note releases have extremely realistic decays, whether stopped by the release of a key or by the release of the damper pedal.
